The Honorable Margaret M. Weichert
Acting Director
Office of Personnel Management

Washington, D.C. 20415

Dear Director Mulvaney and Acting Director Weichert:

We write concerning numerous reports of problems surrounding back pay for hundreds of thousands of federal workers who were furloughed or worked without pay during the shutdown.

The prolonged federal government shutdown that lasted for 35 days forced our federal workers to go without paychecks, requiring them to make difficult financial decisions for their families.

Although Congress passed legislation to guarantee back pay for federal workers, we have heard reports of many instances of shorted pay and inconsistent tax deductions that left workers unable to make mortgage or rent payments. They also received paychecks that did not reflect adjustments for missed insurance premiums, Thrift Savings Plan loan repayments, and court-ordered deductions, which have resulted in confusion and additional burdens on federal workers.

Although we commend your offices for urging the impacted federal agencies to act promptly, we have concerns over the guidance the Office of Personnel Management issued in consultation with the Office of Management and Budget on January 27, 2019, directing payroll providers to “make some simplifying assumptions.”¹

Given that there are several different payroll providers serving federal agencies, we ask you to provide an update on the progress made by each agency that was shut down in ensuring prompt and accurate issuance of back pay to employees who were furloughed or required to work without pay. We also request that you answer the following questions by February 26, 2019:

¹ Memorandum from Margaret M. Weichert, Acting Director, Office of Personnel Management, to Chief Human Capital Officers, Pay and Benefits for Employees Affected by the Lapse in Appropriations (Jan. 27, 2019) (online at www.chcoc.gov/content/pay-and-benefits-employees-affected-lapse-appropriations-1).

1. How many federal workers were furloughed or worked without pay during the shutdown? Of those, how many are still owed backpay?
2. What specific plans are in place to ensure that retroactive pay for furloughed or excepted employees is processed as soon as possible?
3. For instances in which paychecks were issued in amounts less than that owed to federal employees, what steps will be taken to ensure that all remaining amounts owed to workers will be paid in full?
4. What options do federal workers have for retroactively paying wage garnishments which were halted by payroll processors because of the shutdown?
5. What information has been provided by agencies to workers regarding these options?
6. For instances in which there have been inconsistent federal tax deductions between pay periods, what information have agencies provided to workers to help them ensure that the deductions are accurate?

The Committee on Oversight and Reform is the principal oversight committee of the House of Representatives and has broad authority to investigate “any matter” at “any time” under House Rule X.
